Mr. Luke Furlong and Miss Mary McBride were made one and happy by Rev. Father Flanagan at the Catholic Church yesterday.

Putting it in a delicate way, they say at Wilmington that a man has 'orange blossoms in his button-hole." A Los Angeles man got them down tory. The sales were as follows: there the other day. A Vandiver corn-planter which was sold from the Grange Store some time ago is doing excellent service near Anaheim, putting in twenty acres of Madame Arabella Goddard always carries her own grand piano forte with her. It is a magnificent instrument, especially constructed for the madame by Steinway & Sons, New York. A test case against J. L. Williams for keeping open his saloon against the provisions of the lately established ordinance, was brought up before Mayor Beaudry yesterday. For the convenience of all parties interested it was postponed until 10 A. M. to-day. Our friend J. W. Davis is not only an enterprising druggist, but is a good judge of real estate. He coolly bid off an entire block at the sale of the Woolen Mill tract yesterday for $4,000, and half an hour afterward was offered $1,000 for his bargain. Mr. Ralph Rogers, at Orange, has a quantity of Australian gum trees, which he advertises for sale this morning. He will deliver the trees within six months after contract, from six to twelve inches in height and at six to twelve cents each. The Australian gum is becoming very popular for practical and ornamental purposes. The San Bernardino Guardian ad-

In our three daily news-paper offices there are four big scribblers and fighters, who kick the beam at 205, 207, 315 and 230 pounds respectively. Won't somebody come and try to bully the Los Angeles press? Do let them come,

Mr. T. D. Maloney, who has acted as agent for the HERALD for the past ten months, retires from his position and leaves for San Francisco to-day. While connected with the HERALD, Mr. Maloney has proved himself an active and capable business man and we recommend him to the consideration of any community where he may chance to pitch his tent hereafter. The place thus made vacant will be supplied by Will. R. Mr. M. C. Congdon, who is employed in the carriage manufactory of Page & Gravel, had a narrow escape from a foot-pad on Thursday night. About 10 o'clock he was going to his home on San Pedro street, from a meeting of the Knights of Pythias, and in pass-ing the corner of Los Angeles and First streets, encountered a suspicious looking individual loitering about the place. The fellow started after Mr. Congdon in a snggestive way and that gentleman, acting on Falstaff's philosophy, took to his heels. A close chase followed down San Pedro street for about a quarter of a mile, when Mr. Congdon landed in his own yard and was safe from further pursuit. Gentlemen who are compelled to go out late at night should go prepared for these blacklegs.

A great reduction on wood can be had at the Up-town Wood Yard: Wood of all lengths at $14 per cord delivered to any place within the city limits. Persons wishing to order will find a drop letter box in the postoffice. Orders left will be immediately attended to. Satisfaction given to all parties favoring me with their orders.

Madame Arabella Goddard.

The following relative to a lady who is shortly to appear in this city is taken from the London Times of February 12th, 1873: "Madame Arabella Goddard's farewell concert, given last night in St. James' Hall, was one of extraordinary interest. No name for the last twenty years has been more familiar to musical amateurs than that of the lady who has now bid adieu to them forever. What it might have been hardly necessary to say while she was constantly appearing before tnem, may on such an occasion be stated without reserve. Proficient in every school, Madame Goddard is excelled in none. Her general culture, indeed, is almost without precedent. Not only has she, in the course of her long and distinguished career, mastered all the important works of the greatest acknowledged composers from Bach and Handel to Mozart. from Mozart to Beethoven, Hummel, Moscheles, Weber, Mendelssohn, and Sterndale Bennett-but she has acquainted herself, and, through her The schooner Cora arrived yester-day with lumber for J. Further than this, leaving what is termed 'classic' out of the question, there is, now that their author is dead, The business of the Grange Store no one who can perform the fantasias, &c., of Sigismond Thalberg with the same fluency, grace and irreproachable mechanism as Madame Goddard. The renowned virtuoso himself imparted to her the secret of how to play them, and his instructions were the more easily taken advantage of on account of her early studies in Paris under Kalkbrenner, who, as a methodi-cal teacher for young aspirants, never had a rival, and who often boasted, with pride, that he had made two pi-anists, Marie Pleyel and Arabella Goddard-'une Pleyel en herbe,' as he was wont to say." ### GOD'S MILL.

The mills of God are sorrows;
And love and hope and trust
The grain wherewith he feeds them;
And finer than the dust
The substance that his labor
Gives back unto the soul,
Which buggs crieth for it.

Which, hugry, crieth for it, As on the ages roll. Ah, to weak human knowledge
The end is far away,
For which we bear the toiling
And burden of to-day!
But God, in His divineness, Has set the task, that we, By heating in the furnace,

May all the purer be. And, though the way is weary,
His love is all around;
Lift but the dark cloud-curtain,
And, lo! the light is found.
He holds our hands when silence
Lays on loved lips her touch;
And though His mills grind surely
They will not grind too much.

Say that the waves of passion Come surging wild and fast, And yet can find no comfort From present or from past; Still, is there yet a future, And countiess souls to meet; And who can tell the pathway That lies before his feet?

There is no worthless refuse In all that God has done, And will He end in darkness The work in light begun? I hold that all our present And all our days gone past But help to fill a purpose Made perfect at the last.

Made perfect at the last.

We may not see the glory
That lies about our way;
The blind man cannot witness
The beauty of the day;
But to his ear come whispers
That tell him it is fair—
The song of birds, the murmur
Of insects in the air. Of insects in the air.

The breath of flowers, that mingles With salt air from the seas;
And, though he cannot see them,
His soul can seize on these;
And through the voice of Nature,
To him God's love is known,
And yet for him most heavy
The firmly grinding stone.

The mills of God grind slowly, And grind exceeding small, And yet His boundless loving Is given to us ail;
From sorrow comes fruition,
And victory from tears.
Love only is eternal;
Pain fades away in years.

We may not know His purpose,
We may not feel His hand,
As toiling waiting, weary,
We wander through the land;
We may not guess the ending.
But God will surely prove,
If earth is of His handlwork,
A Father we can love. A Father we can love. Souls that are full of weeping, Eyes that are full of tears, For you God's mill runs slowly,

And weary are the years;
And weary are the years;
But just beyond the shadows,
That gather with the night,
The dawn of hope is breaking,
And love makes all things bright.
