

PALOMAR TO OPEN COURTS

First Two Pavements at New Tennis Plant Ready Tomorrow

The Palomar Tennis Club's first two courts will be thrown open for use tomorrow morning, according to an announcement yesterday by Rans Abbott, manager of that organization. The courts were finished last week, but have been given additional time to set. The exhibition and championship courts are the ones that are finished.

Thursday nine courts will be finished. Palomar plans to celebrate their opening, and the two that are ready tomorrow, with a grand carnival. All the well-known local net stars, left after the annual hegira of the tennis colony to Del Monte, will be invited. Motion-picture stars and civic dignitaries of Los Angeles will be on hand to help with the celebration.

It will be in the middle of October, at least, before the clubhouse, and entire plant will be opened, Abbott stated. Construction is going at top speed, but, due to the many facilities other than those for tennis, that are being built, it will take some time to finish it.

The membership list has grown during the past week from 300 to more than 400. Applications for entrance are being filed faster than the committee can handle. Palomar officials have applied to the Southern California Tennis Association for a permit to stage a tournament this fall.
