

REMEMBERING BACK ...

by Sandy Hoffman, former Detroit and Beverly Hills, Calif., restaurant entrepreneur and caterer ... When Barbra Streisand, Tony Martin and Milton Berle all broke out in tears at the kosher restaurant of Steven Spielberg's mother, as Billy "Old Black Magic" Daniels sang "My Yiddishe Mama" for them ... When former Detroiter Sanford Adler, developed Cheviot Hills adjacent to Beverly Hills, and named a cross street "Krim Drive and Kim Drive" at the love nest corner he built for his best friend, ex-Detroiter Mac Krim, and Mac's sweetheart, Kim Novak ... When Frank Sinatra appeared in Detroit for a charitable event and Sandy escorted him around town to the Town Pump on Montcalm, where Sinatra did a duet with Saucy Sylvia Stoun, then to Grecian Gardens in Greektown, where he sang with Billy "Baby Face" Rose after dining in the back room, and to the London Chop House for what Frank considered the best hamburger anywhere with Chef Pancho Velez's wonderful Pancho Sauce.
