

New Pacific Military Academy Limits Its Select Enrollment of Students to 75

Homelike Atmosphere, Individual Instruction, Are Features of Institution

PACIFIC MILITARY ACADEMY

The comforts of home combined with a well-balanced education are among the features of the Pacific Military Academy, one of the newest schools in Southern California.

The faculty, which has been carefully selected, is able to give special attention to all students, for the enrollment is limited to 75.

The courses of study follow the general lines specified by the state educational authorities and grades rise from the third elementary to the third year of high school.

All buildings are modern, with outdoor classrooms, airy sleeping quarters and well-equipped gymnasium and swimming pool.

The location of the new school is ideal for all outdoor development of the growing youth, being situated at Culver City, half way between Los Angeles and the beaches. It is also within sight of the beautiful Santa Monica mountains.

References are required for all the new pupils. Enrollment is now in progress for the fall term, which opens September 20.