

Capt. R. W. Ozmun of Tustin, one of the wealthiest residents of the county, died at Santa Ana Sunday, as the result of a paralytic stroke. Capt. Ozmun recently made a trip to the East and upon his return was afflicted with a nervous break-down, which resolved itself in a mild form of paralysis. For more than a week he had been in a semi-conscious condition. The funeral, which was private, was held in Los Angeles, Tuesday morning and interment was in Rosedale cemetery. Before coming to Tustin two years ago Ozmun made his home in Los Angeles. Captain Ozmun was the heaviest stockholder in the Orange Growers' National Bank of Riverside when that institution was forced to close its doors. In addition to large holdings in securities and stocks, Captain Ozmun was the owner of considerable realty in Tustin, Riverside, Los Angeles, St. Paul, Minn., and other places. He was an enthusiastic automobilist and yachtsman, having his private yacht and a number of fine touring cars and runabouts. Captain Ozmun is survived by a widow and two young sons.
